⁵ Now through March 1, the Vermont Center for ⁶ Photography (VCP), 10 Green St., presents "Icons In Hand:
⁷ Masterworks from a Local Collection," an exhibition that brings
⁸ museum-caliber black-and-white photographs by many well-
⁹ known photographers to Brattleboro.

¹⁰ "Drawn from a remarkable local collection, these prints
¹¹ invite you to get close — see the paper, the grain, the edge of the 12 negative — and slow down with images that carry time and story

13 across generations,” organizers said in a news release. “It’s a 14 chance to experience iconic photographs as objects, not just 15 pictures on a screen: how they’re printed, toned, and cared for, 16 and why those choices matter to what we see and feel.”

17 The exhibition includes 36 works by 31 artists, spanning 18 nearly a century of photography, including works by Ansel
19 Adams, Diane Arbus, Ruth Bernhard, Dorothea Lange, Man Ray,
20 and Robert Mapplethorpe.

21 This exhibition was made possible through the support of 22 Mark Tarmy and is co-curated by Joshua Farr and Mitch Weiss.
23 The exhibit also “opens a welcoming conversation” about 24 collecting: why people choose to live with photographs, how a 25 print’s history and process shape its meaning, and how private 26 stewardship can strengthen a community’s cultural life.

27 “Icons In Hand is both a celebration of photography’s 28 classics and a thank-you to the neighbors who safeguard them,” 29 organizers said. “Above all, it reflects VCP’s role as a place where 30 artists, audiences, and prints meet — face to face, in the shared 31 light of the gallery.”
