5 Curator Phong H. Bui and art historian Alexander Nagel
6 will discuss the Brattleboro Museum & Art Center (BMAC)
7 exhibition "Singing in Unison, Part 13: Homage to Meyer
8 Schapiro," at BMAC on Saturday, Feb. 7, at 5:30 p.m.
9 Invited by BMAC to curate an exhibition at the museum,
10 Bui, the co-founder, publisher, and artistic director of monthly

11 journal The Brooklyn Rail, proposed a show that would serve as a 12 tribute to his late mentor, the art historian, Meyer Schapiro.

13 "My personal connection with southern Vermont comes 14 from the time I spent with Schapiro and his wife, Lillian, at their 15 longtime summer home in Rawsonville," said Bui in a news 16 release. "When BMAC offered me the opportunity to curate an 17 exhibition, my immediate thought was to pull together a group
18 show featuring some of the many amazing artists who were 19 connected to Schapiro in his lifetime."

20 The resulting exhibition, "Singing in Unison, Part 13:
21 Homage to Meyer Schapiro," opened at BMAC last November
22 and remains on view through Feb. 15. Featuring works by more 23 than 30 artists, including Mark Rothko, Philip Guston, and 24 Arshile Gorky, the exhibition occupies BMAC's Wolf Kahn &
25 Emily Mason Gallery and two adjoining galleries.

26 One entire wall of the exhibition consists of a recreation 27 of a wall in Bui's Brooklyn home, which he calls his "Shrine to 28 Schapiro." It includes dozens of small artworks by Schapiro 29 himself, which he created "not because he considered himself an 30 artist, but because he believed that as an art critic and historian, 31 it was imperative for him to have hands-on experience in making
32 art, in order to understand the choices and challenges artists face
33 in making their work," said Bui.

34 The "Singing in Unison" portion of the exhibition title 35 references an ongoing series of curatorial projects launched by 36 Bui and The Brooklyn Rail in 2022 (of which the BMAC 37 exhibition is the 13th) that advocates for "the art of joining" as a 38 "social and cultural process that can mediate the isolation and 39 disequilibrium many people feel in today's political and cultural 40 climate."

41 "The sense of community that Meyer Schapiro cultivated
42 among artists and intellectuals of the 20th century has been a 43 guiding force for the remarkable work that Phong Bui and The 44 Brooklyn Rail have done over the past 25 years, through their 45 indispensable publication, curatorial projects, online

46 programming, and social gatherings," said BMAC Director Danny 47 Lichtenfeld. "And it is precisely in keeping with the ethos that 48 motivates our work at BMAC—bringing people together and 49 fostering connection and understanding through art."

50 Joining Bui for the Feb. 7 conversation about the 51 exhibition and Schapiro's legacy is art historian and author
52 Alexander Nagel, Craig Hugh Smyth Professor of Fine Arts at 53 NYU's Institute of Fine Arts. Nagel's academic interests include 54 "the ways art allows humans to think through time and find 55 orientation in the world, and how material artifacts shape
56 meanings and structure ways of being in an environment."

57 "Singing in Unison, Part 13: Homage to Meyer Schapiro"
58 is supported in part by Christopher and Vimala Steadman and the 59 Wolf Kahn Foundation.

60 Admission is free; registration is recommended, but 61 walk-ins are welcome. Register at brattleboromuseum.org or call 62 802-257-0124, ext. 101.
