On view at the Putney Public Library, 55 Main St., through Aug. 29 is a summer exhibition of selected artwork entitled "Part One."

The current group show includes Putney artists, all of whom recently exhibited their individual work at the library. The eclectic exhibit reflects the Putney community's interest in arts.
The library has served as a venue for art since the early 1980s, when art exhibitions and art auctions became regular events. The 12 new library building, constructed in 2005, reserved several walls 13 for artwork, and a new art hanging system was purchased.

14 There is art in the library because the Library “promotes 15 the use of a high-quality, useful collection responsive to diverse 16 community educational, informational, and recreational needs. It 17 serves as a portal to materials beyond the scope of its 18 collection,” according to its Statement of Purpose.

19 The exhibits in the library present a cross section of 20 varying approaches to art and an introduction to Putney artists, 21 offering them an opportunity to show their artwork in their 22 community and also to connect directly with members of the 23 community.

24 “I am always excited to see what new artwork arrives, 25 whether it is figurative or abstract; there is such variety, expertise 26 and inventiveness.” said Nancy Storrow, the library’s art curator, 27 in a news release.

28 On display will be watercolors, fiber work, prints, natural 29 materials, oil paintings and metal work. Artists include Finn
30 Campman, Liz Hawkes deNiord, Basha Freudenberg, Candace
31 Jensen, Jane Kolias, Abigail Littlefield, Bonnie Mennell, Amber 32 Paris, Nina Salvatore, Lynne Weinstein, and Tress Zuverino.

33 The show will be open during library hours: Monday–
34 Friday, 10:30 a.m.–6 p.m, and Saturdays, 10 a.m.–1 p.m.
